outs" (scavouts? Maybe). In conclusion, this film in itself is a great way to open some eyes a little and introduce people to the problems of social media, but it doesn't offer enough information to know precisely what we are fighting against, neither did it offer working solutions to those problems that were mentioned in it.

Social Dilemma: Charpentier Enzo (France)

I didn't see the whole film, but the parts I saw were very interesting. I think everyone should see it because it has an impact on our future and few people care about that. This film taught me a lot of things about our generation. It was well explained and very clear. People don't care about that so that's why this film must be seen by everyone. Thanks a lot.

Nevlston 1 (Hungary)

I haven't seen the full documentary but I absolutely think the same. The score you mentioned is one of my favorites too. I enjoyed the movie because it opens our eyes.

Barbosa Nicole (France)

This documentary portrays different aspects of social media so I really enjoyed learning all of the different kinds of consequences for humans beings each time we use our phones. For me, this documentary is captivating and really interesting which targets younger generations because our generation (generation Z) is the most social media. This documentary then warns us about the serious social problems that will be principal in the future.

I think the movie "Social Dilemma" is interesting because it is a good summary of our society. It talks about the problems we face because of social media too but also about the problems we are likely to

I don't see the whole film neither but I agree with you.

Nevlston 1 (Hungary)

I really liked the way the film was made. There were people who looked for the biggest companies like Facebook. And my favourite moment was from their way when they said the fake news don't reach the truth is wrong.

Nevlston 1 (Hungary)

Actually I don't see the whole movie but I totally agree with you. It can be scary to think about how easy to manipulate the human mind is.

bunch of middle aged rich white tech guru men to tell me that. I think there's a lot to be said about the positive effects of social media that aren't talked about here. It shouldn't just be "social media bad." I think social media requires a balance; it requires critical thinking when it comes to information.

This documentary feels like it's only promoting that social media ruins kids lives (with terrible cut scenes.)

Social Dilemma Elya DUBOS (France)

I think this movie was very interesting and according to the society because we can learn the things that social media do be more influent in our society, with young people, and how it can be one of the

I agree with you but I think there is no "too dramatic" expression in any aspects matter. Because there are real problems. There is a very influence can be destroyed your self-esteem, however I said that I agree with because there are some other ways to use the social media well, but not everywhere teach how to find the
